

To Whom it May Concern,

Jonah McCarthy has my highest recommendation. He was a dual-enrolled student in my ENC1101 Freshman Composition course at Florida State College at Jacksonville in the Fall semester of 2019. Jonah was one of the best writers I have had in seventeen years of teaching composition. He started the semester with a confident and persuasive writing style supporting his ideas with logic and detailed examples. In fact, the first journal he wrote was the one I selected to share with the class as a model of strong writing. His fellow classmates were impressed with his ability to express ideas with clarity and enthusiasm.

Throughout the semester, Jonah continued to build upon his talent. For his final course project, he combined curiosity and exploration, research results, reflection methods, critical thinking and creativity to analyze his future career possibilities. Jonah brings a spirit of open-mindedness and investigation to all challenges he undertakes. As I said to him, while communication may not be the focus of his future career path, he will be able to use his excellent writing and speaking skills in any life endeavor.

Jonah is a responsible, reliable and resourceful young man who will excel in any educational environment. His work is thorough, thoughtful and professional. He meets deadlines, follows directions and plans his time effectively. In addition, he is amiable and supportive of his classmates.

I wish him all the best in his future learning and career opportunities. If I can provide additional information, please email me: abaskin@fscj.edu.

Sincerely,

Amy Baskin
